Reflection

- Relevance to the audience is #1.
- Make it personal (e-mails and RSVPs).
- Partner with others whenever possible.
- Set high goals, but be realistic.

Any book suggestions?

This Penn State York library workshop serves as an introduction to research and the basic forms of scholarly resources.
The Case of the Missing Faculty Members
Russ Hall, Penn State Behrend
John M. Lilley Library at Penn State Behrend (Erie)
Needed to Get Faculty Involved...PARTY!!!!!
Not That Kind of Party...Publication Party

- Give faculty an opportunity to show their work to the rest of the campus.

- Help students and staff realize what faculty do when they’re not teaching.

- Chance for faculty from our different schools to intermingle, as well as mix with staff and students. Break down silos.
2009 Publication Party

- Just requested publications from Engineering and Humanities & Social Sci.
  - Wanted to keep the first one a manageable size

- More than 40 faculty members submitted publications
- Total number of publications exceeded 80

Very Happy Librarian and Library Director
2010 Publication Party

- Schools of Business and Science invited.

ABJECT FAILURE

- Number of Potential Participants: 1 (one, un, uno, eins)
- Party CANCELLED!!!!
Took a Couple Years to Nurse Our Wounds
Rally Time!

- Worked with two schools, why not try it with all four?
- Appeal to the Chancellor (who was already library friendly)
- Appeal to the School Directors
  - Stoke the fires of friendly rivalries
Jealously Can Be Your Friend
2012: Year Of Triumph
Success From Failure

- Publication Party is now a biennial fixture on the campus calendar
- 2012: All schools participated, over 100 publications
- 2014: All schools participated, over 100 publications
- 2016: On sabbatical, no stats collected (guesstimate is this was on par)
- 2018: All schools participated, around 100 publications (ran out of space)
